Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Business Spelling Book: For Use in High Schools and Business Colleges That there is a widespread interest in spelling among all classes and especially among business men is apparent. The latter are becoming intolerant of the stenographer or the bookkeeper who defaces a page with misspelled words. It is believed that both school men and business men will welcome a book relating directly to business life, as well as reflecting the latest advances in the science of education. The following are the chief distinctive features of this book: 1. The thoroughly practical character of the vocabulary. It has recently been stated (by an investigator of the Russell Sage Foundation) that useful spelling lists cannot be compiled by sitting at the desk and deciding which words people ought to know how to spell. The words in this book have been selected by quite a different method, namely, by collaboration with business men and by careful study from other practical sources of the words necessary to be learned by students in secondary schools. Letters were written to men representing all forms of business, requesting a list of ten common words often misspelled in their correspondence and also a list of ten words pertaining to their special business frequently misspelled.
