This work is written at the request of many earnest women who realize the great need among our people of a better knowledge of the body and of the natural laws that govern it, and who realize that such knowledge can come only through physical education in the home. Most of the ills that afflict the human body are the outgrowth of insufficient knowledge of one s self; and, in this my first volume, I shall lay a foundation of such knowledge as will go far toward teaching self-preservation, the prevention of invalidism, both physical and mental, and the restoration to our people of their birthright of health....
