Excerpt: . . . the midst of the commotion, the defendant came into the yard and being enraged at the escape of the convicts, seized a clapboard and struck the plaintiff three or four times over the shoulders and back. This does not impress us as a proper case for the infliction of exemplary damages or smart money. An employer who, in a fit of passion, assaults his servant for a neglect of duty, thereby commits a breach of the peace and an actionable wrong. But if, making due allowance for the infirmities of human temper, the defendant has a reasonable excuse, arising from the provocation or fault of the plaintiff, but not sufficient to justify entirely the act done, then damages ought not to be assessed by way of punishment and the circumstances of mitigation should be considered. For the public offense, Massey swore out a warrant, upon which...
