Summary Eleven candidate off-the-shelf coatings were tested in the laboratory and analyzed using rigorous test methods. The performance of coatings B, D, and G indicates outstanding performance. Coatings D and G are suitable replacements for the current system. They are applied at the smallest film thickness of applied coating and would be the easiest to implement. Sample D could be a practical coating, but there are some issues with the tight tolerances on some projectiles that would have to be addressed. This coating combination is considered...
